Introduction

1. The Working Group on the Universal Periodic Review, established in accordance with Human Rights Council resolution 5/1 of 18 June 2007, held its twenty-first session from 19 to 30 January 2015. The review of Kyrgyzstan was held at the 1st meeting on 19 January 2015. The delegation of Kyrgyzstan was headed by the Vice Prime Minister of Kyrgyzstan, Abdyrakman Mamataliev. At its 10th meeting, held on 23 January 2015, the Working Group adopted the report on Kyrgyzstan.

2. On 13 January 2015, the Human Rights Council selected the following group of rapporteurs (troika) to facilitate the review of Kyrgyzstan: Montenegro, Morocco and the United Arab Emirates.

3. In accordance with paragraph 15 of the annex to resolution 5/1 and paragraph 5 of the annex to resolution 16/21, the following documents were issued for the review of Kyrgyzstan:

(a) A national report submitted/written presentation made in accordance with paragraph 15 (a) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/KGZ/1);

(b) A compilation prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (b) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/KGZ/2);

(c) A summary prepared by OHCHR in accordance with paragraph 15 (c) (A/HRC/WG.6/21/KGZ/3).

4. A list of questions prepared in advance by Belgium, the Czech Republic, Germany, Norway, Slovenia, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and the United States of America was transmitted to Kyrgyzstan through the troika. These questions are available on the extranet of the universal periodic review (UPR).

I. Summary of the proceedings of the review process

A. Presentation by the State under review

5. The delegation reaffirmed the commitment of Kyrgyzstan to the promotion and protection of human rights. Democratization and the protection of human rights remained a national priority. Since its first review in 2010, Kyrgyzstan had reaffirmed its adherence to democratic change. During the reporting period, the country had faced serious challenges, testing the strength of national unity. Despite those challenges, Kyrgyzstan had managed to maintain stability.

6. Kyrgyzstan had taken the path of building parliamentary democracy. To that end, a new Constitution had been adopted and a coalition Government formed. A tradition of peaceful transfer of power had been established thanks to the democratic elections of October, 2011. The Government recognized that holding fair and transparent parliamentary elections in 2015 would be an important factor in ensuring the stability of the country.

7. The delegation highlighted the Government's commitment to strengthening the rule of law and democratic institutions. Fully aware of the existing human rights issues, the Government had strengthened its efforts to improve the respect of human rights and of the rule of law in past years. Substantive work had been done to bring legislation into conformity with the Constitution and international human rights standards.

8. The Constitution was adopted by referendum in 2010 in an open and transparent process of constitutional reform. The Constitution affirmed the principle of the rule of law, guaranteed the principles of separation of powers and the independence of courts, and established safeguards for the protection of human rights.

9. The norms enshrined in the Constitution asserted the utmost importance of human rights and freedoms. International human rights instruments were directly applicable and took precedence over other international agreements.

10. The delegation explained that the independence of the judiciary was guaranteed by the Constitution and judges were independent and subordinate only to the Constitution and the law. Citizens were entitled to judicial protection and to legal aid in cases prescribed by law. Kyrgyzstan had intensified efforts to create the institution of a grand jury so the citizens could take part in the administration of justice.

11. The judicial system continued to face various challenges. The Judicial Reform Council, an advisory and consultative body, had been set up to coordinate the priority measures of the judicial reform. The Council of Judges had developed the comprehensive National Programme for the Development of the Judicial System 2013–2017, which provided a thorough analysis and specific recommendations related to key issues of the judiciary and of access to justice.

12. In 2010, the country had experienced ethnic conflict in the south of the country that resulted in casualties. The Government managed to stabilize the situation and stopped the conflict. The Government had implemented a policy framework for harmonization of inter-ethnic relations and for long-term integration. The National Sustainable Development Strategy 2013–2017 and the Policy Framework on Strengthening National Unity and Inter-Ethnic Relations had been developed and adopted through open and wide discussion of the situation after the 2010 conflict.

13. The process of improving the electoral legislation before the 2015 parliamentary elections had aimed to improve the representation of women and ethnic minorities in elected bodies by applying a quota to candidate lists.

14. The delegation highlighted the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council, attached to the Government as an interministerial consultative and advisory body. The Coordinating Council was authorized, inter alia, to conduct regular monitoring of the human rights situation, take measures to implement recommendations of international human rights bodies, engage with civil society and other stakeholders and to discuss and develop recommendations in order to ensure the protection of human rights in the country.

15. Following the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (OPCAT) in 2008, the National Centre for the Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment had been established. That national preventive mechanism consisted of representatives of civil society, the Ombudsman and the Parliament. The Centre had been facing some challenges, including a lack of sufficient funding for its effective functioning. Despite the challenges, two offices of the Centre had already been opened.

16. An interministerial working group had been established for the preparation of the national report for the second cycle of UPR. Legal and comparative analysis of law and practice as well as an analysis of root causes of human rights violations had been conducted in the process of the preparation of the national report. The national report documented achievements and remaining challenges.

17. The Government had followed the recommendations that were put forward during the 2010 review calling for an open and transparent process of constitutional reform and strong human rights provisions in the Constitution. In the framework of the follow-up to UPR, the Children's Code had been adopted to strengthen the national child protection system. Additionally, the Peaceful Assembly Act had been adopted in line with the provisions of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR). The national report provided information about measures undertaken to combat gender-based violence, bride-kidnapping and trafficking in human beings, and about the impact of anti-corruption initiatives.

18. The delegation pointed out that the report had been prepared during a process of wide-ranging national consultations that had included representatives of State bodies and non-governmental organizations (NGOs). The Government planned to discuss new methods and approaches for the implementation of the recommendations of the review.

19. Since the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council in 2013, the issue of a standing invitation to the special procedure mandate holders was being discussed within the relevant government bodies.

20. The delegation reiterated the firm commitment of Kyrgyzstan to improving the human rights protection system and ensuring the compliance of national law with the international human rights system. UPR was not a one-off event but a continuous process and required determined efforts by the Government.

21. Kyrgyzstan had presented its candidacy for membership of the Human Rights Council for the period 2016–2018. The Regional Office for Central Asia of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR) had been established in Bishkek. The United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights and the Assistant Secretary-General for Human Rights had visited Kyrgyzstan during the reporting period. Kyrgyzstan cooperated actively with the United Nations treaty bodies and submitted its reports to the Committee on the Rights of the Child, the Human Rights Committee, the Committee on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, the Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination, the Committee against Torture and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women.

22. The delegation provided its responses to advance questions. In respect of the ratification of the Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court (ICC), Kyrgyzstan had been following the work of ICC and some additional time was required for it to become confident in the effectiveness of the Court before making a final decision on the ratification of the Rome Statute. At the same time, the national legislation envisaged criminal responsibility for crimes against humanity.

23. Regarding the questions on a standing invitation to the special procedure mandate holders of the Human Rights Council, the delegation highlighted the continuing cooperation of Kyrgyzstan with mandate holders. It recalled that, in the past 14 years, eight special mandate holders had visited Kyrgyzstan, and two special rapporteurs had paid a visit during the reporting period. Kyrgyzstan had agreed in principle to the visits of the Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances and the Special Rapporteur on the rights to freedom of peaceful assembly and of association. The Government was looking forward to those visits and the date of the visits depended on the proposals of the special procedure mandate holders.

24. Kyrgyzstan was a party to eight out of the nine core human rights treaties. The authorities has taken measures to study thoroughly the possibility and implications of ratifying the International Convention for the Protection of All Persons from Enforced Disappearance (ICPPED), the only core international human rights instrument that Kyrgyzstan had not yet signed. In that respect, the upcoming visit of the Working Group on Enforced Disappearance or Involuntary Disappearances would be important.

25. In 2014, the Government had updated the National Action Plan on the Prevention and Reduction of Statelessness, which included specific actions for the ratification of the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and for harmonization of the legislation with the relevant international standards. The Government had been jointly implementing a project with the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to register stateless persons and persons without identity documents. More than two dozen mobile units had been operating in rural areas, providing legal advice on how to apply for citizenship or for obtaining relevant documents free of charge.

26. Kyrgyzstan recognized the competency of the Human Rights Committee and CEDAW to consider and examine individual complaints. Pursuant to the Code of Criminal Procedure, a decision of an international body constituted grounds for reopening criminal proceedings in the light of new circumstances surrounding a case. Kyrgyzstan had been working to develop a methodology for implementing the decisions of the United Nations human rights bodies on individual complaints.

27. The parliament had an important role in the realization of human rights, through monitoring human rights issues and cooperating closely with the Human Rights Coordinating Council, the national preventive mechanism, the Ombudsman, civil society and the international organizations.

28. The parliament had established a working group within the Parliamentary Committee for Human Rights, Constitutional Law and State Structure in order to study and discuss different versions of draft amendments to the Law on the Ombudsman submitted by the Office of the Ombudsman and several members of the parliament.

29. Recognizing the importance of the freedom of religion and belief, the Government had set up a working group to revise State policy on the freedom of religion. In 2014, the Constitutional Chamber of the Supreme Court had removed from the legislation, declaring it unconstitutional, a provision which made the registration of religious organizations subject to the approval of local authorities. That would considerably simplify the process of registration of religious organizations. The parliament had been paying special attention to and had taken measures for the enjoyment of freedom of religion by individuals.

30. Regarding the bill on the prohibition on the formation of positive attitudes towards lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender (LGBT) persons, the delegation stated that the bill had been widely discussed within the society and by the parliament. Different views, including negative and critical comments, had been expressed by members of the parliament and by civil society representatives. A working group had been established under the relevant parliamentary committee to study international experience and expertise on that issue and to suggest relevant amendments to the draft law. The parliament was committed to law-making through the process of wide and thorough discussions with relevant stakeholders.

B. Interactive dialogue and responses by the State under review

31. During the interactive dialogue, 73 delegations made statements. Recommendations made during the dialogue are to be found in section II of the present report.

32. Sri Lanka commended Kyrgyzstan for establishing the Human Rights Coordinating Council and for facilitating the visits of the Special Rapporteurs on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and on the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography. It noted the National Development Programme for the Development of the Judicial System and the National Sustainable Development Strategy. It made recommendations.

33. Sweden noted that inter-ethnic reconciliation and greater representation of ethnic minorities were priorities. It noted with concern violence against and slander of LGBT persons, and the draft legislation on “dissemination of information about non-traditional sexual relations”. Sweden encouraged training on LGBT issues. It made recommendations.

34. Switzerland expressed concerns about draft legislation regarding foreign sources of financing of NGOs and that human rights NGOs became victims of defamation. It commended the establishment of the national mechanism against torture following the ratification of OPCAT. Switzerland made recommendations.

35. Tajikistan noted the positive changes in the promotion and protection of human rights, and the readiness of Kyrgyzstan to cooperate with the international human rights mechanisms. Tajikistan made recommendations.

36. Thailand commended the adoption of the Constitution and welcomed efforts to ratify international human rights instruments. It noted the legislative reform to ensure gender equality. However, early marriage, bride-kidnapping and violence against women persisted. Thailand made recommendations.

37. Timor-Leste noted with appreciation the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council to enforce the implementation of international human rights obligations, and of the National Council on Gender Issues. It remained concerned by the widespread violence against women. Timor-Leste made recommendations.

38. Turkey noted the efforts of Kyrgyzstan to improve the human rights situation, as well as its cooperation with international human rights mechanisms. It commended Kyrgyzstan on its determination to combat corruption and highlighted a new move to finalize legislative initiatives in that respect. Turkey made recommendations.

39. Turkmenistan welcomed efforts to strengthen legislative, institutional and policy mechanisms to protect human rights, and the adoption of the Children’s Code in 2012. It appreciated the amendments to the Civil and Criminal Codes. Turkmenistan made recommendations.

40. The United Kingdom commended Kyrgyzstan for its adoption of a new Constitution. It encouraged Kyrgyzstan to ensure full respect for the Constitution and its international human rights commitments and complete the judicial reform in order to provide access to justice for all, including for those affected by the 2010 violence. It made recommendations.

41. The United States of America noted several legislative initiatives that threatened to jeopardize the democratic achievements of Kyrgyzstan. It remained concerned by the limited progress towards reconciliation of ethnic groups following the 2010 ethnic violence, and the disproportionate prosecution and conviction of ethnic Uzbeks for that violence. It made recommendations.

42. Uruguay welcomed the adoption of the 2010 Constitution, guaranteeing the separation of powers and the rule of law. It noted that several international mechanisms had requested the Government to strengthen the fight against torture and against discrimination. Uruguay made recommendations.

43. The Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela welcomed the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council and highlighted the efforts of Kyrgyzstan to ensure gender equality and to improve the situation of the most vulnerable groups. It made recommendations.

44. Viet Nam noted steps taken by Kyrgyzstan to resolve recent conflicts among communities and hoped that those efforts could be strengthened. It noted efforts to protect the rights of persons belonging to vulnerable groups, especially women and children. Viet Nam made recommendations.

45. Afghanistan commended Kyrgyzstan on the adoption of a new Constitution incorporating human rights provisions and of strategies related to the protection of human rights. It noted draft legislation intended to bring the Ombudsman into full conformity with the Paris Principles. Afghanistan made a recommendation.

46. Albania welcomed the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council in 2013 to enforce the implementation of international human rights obligations, as well as the enhanced cooperation with OHCHR. Albania made recommendations.

47. Algeria noted the improvements in the legal framework for the rights of the child, peaceful assembly, the fight against torture and human trafficking. It noted with satisfaction steps taken for human rights education for State agents. Algeria made recommendations.

48. Angola commended the special attention given to gender equality and to protection of children's rights. It recognized the efforts for the creation of the National Programme for the Development of the Judicial System 2014–2017. Angola made a recommendation.

49. Argentina appreciated the ratification of the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR. It noted challenges that remained regarding the situation of minority groups. It expressed concern about refoulement of refugees and asylum seekers to their countries of origin. Argentina made recommendations.

50. Armenia noted efforts to promote the rights of women and children, including to combat early marriage, eradicate poverty, combat human trafficking and protect the rights of minorities. Armenia made recommendations.

51. Australia noted with concern the reports of abuses in relation to ethnic tensions. It called for effective implementation of the laws prohibiting discrimination and providing for freedom of expression and religion. Further work was needed to implement laws protecting women. Australia made recommendations.

52. Austria expressed concern about torture and ill-treatment in police detention; violence, harassment and discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation; the parliament's consideration of so-called "anti-gay propaganda" and the "foreign agents" bills; and violence against women. It made recommendations.

53. Bangladesh appreciated efforts to empower women and to reduce poverty. It recalled the concern expressed by CRC about the growing number of children placed in care institutions owing to poverty and about the growing number of HIV/AIDS infections. Bangladesh made recommendations.

54. Belarus noted the efforts to improve national legislation and the measures implemented to ensure the protection and promotion of human rights. It noted the adoption of the Social Protection Development Strategy, the National Strategy for Gender Equality and its related plan and the State programme to combat human trafficking. Belarus made recommendations.

55. Belgium commended efforts the abolition of the death penalty and progress on freedom of expression. It stated that additional efforts were needed to consolidate progress, noting the importance of freedom of expression and association. Belgium made recommendations.

56. Bhutan appreciated reforms initiated to implement the UPR recommendations, particularly measures taken to reform the judicial system in order to ensure its impartiality and independence. It commended Kyrgyzstan for setting out the legal and organizational basis for combating corruption. It made a recommendation.

57. Brazil commended the adoption of a new Constitution, the ratification of the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR and the signing of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (CRPD), as recommended by Brazil during the 2010 review. It encouraged Kyrgyzstan to develop policies and programmes to alleviate and eradicate poverty. It made recommendations.

58. Canada requested information on the implementation of the accepted recommendation it had put forward regarding the review and strengthening of existing legislation to combat violence against women and discrimination on any grounds. Canada made recommendations.

59. Chile acknowledged recent legislative reforms and the accession to various human rights instruments. It took note of the information provided by the Government regarding the challenges posed by the harmonization of legislation, the Constitution and treaties. Chile made recommendations.

60. China commended Kyrgyzstan for efforts to promote gender equality and to combat human trafficking and sexual violence. Efforts had been taken to promote the harmonious coexistence of ethnic groups, multilingual education, cultural heritage and ethnic diversity. It made a recommendation.

61. Costa Rica highlighted reforms strengthening human rights protection mechanisms. It welcomed the ratification of the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR and the signing of CRPD. It noted the importance of an independent judiciary and of freedom of expression and association. It made recommendations.

62. The delegation explained that the purpose of the new amendment to the Criminal Code criminalizing the dissemination of statements about the commission of crimes had been to prevent false statements being made knowingly about the commission of crimes. The Constitutional Chamber of the Supreme Court had ruled that the amendment was not in conflict with the provisions of the Constitution.

63. In response to questions regarding the draft law on reporting requirements of NGOs receiving funding from foreign sources, the delegation explained that several deputies of the parliament had initiated the draft law with the aim of ensuring transparency in the functioning of non-profit organizations. Representatives of civil society and international organizations had expressed concern that the draft law imposed unjustified restrictions on the exercise of NGOs' freedom of association and thus was incompatible with international human rights standards and the Constitution. In view thereof, the Parliamentary Committee for Human Rights, Constitutional Law and State Structure had held a parliamentary hearing on the draft law and had compiled recommendations for additions and changes to be made before its adoption.

64. All draft laws directly affecting the rights and interest of citizens had been subject to thorough consideration and wide discussion, taking into account the opinions of human rights experts.

65. The delegation reported on the reform of the law enforcement agencies that had been carried out in order to bring law enforcement work into line with international human rights standards and to establish an effective system for maintaining public order and security. In the framework of the reform, new criteria for assessing the work of the law enforcement agencies had been developed with the active participation of civil society representatives, and an internal and external monitoring system had been put in place to ensure transparency and accountability in the work of the law enforcement agencies. Reforming the Academy attached to the Ministry of Affairs, in particular improving its curriculum and teaching methods, had been identified as a key factor for the effective implementation of a new model for the work of the law enforcement agencies. New procedures and processes for the recruitment and promotion of police officers had been developed in cooperation with civil society. The reform's objectives included the formation of a multi-ethnic police force and gender equality within the law enforcement agencies. Nevertheless, significant work still remained to be carried out in cooperation with civil society and international organizations, as the reform was in its initial stage of implementation.

66. Regarding questions on domestic violence, the Ministry of Internal Affairs had developed instructions and regulations to organize the law enforcement bodies to prevent domestic violence effectively and implement the Social and Legal Protection against Domestic Violence Act. Amendments to the Administrative Code had also been drafted and adopted at the initiative of the Ministry of Interior in order to ensure harsher administrative penalties for domestic violence, including administrative detention up to five days. A memorandum of understanding had been signed between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and crisis centres to organize their cooperation in combating domestic violence and bride-kidnapping. The delegation referred to the significant increase in registered cases of domestic violence in the period 2010–2014, owing to the effective response of police officers and the cooperation established between local authorities, social and health workers and civil society representatives.

67. The legal amendments to the Criminal Code provided harsher punishments for the abduction of women and girls for the purpose of marriage, as well as for the forced marriage of girls. Those legal amendments had been drafted during extensive consultations with civil society representatives and international organizations.

68. Several measures had been taken to: ensure unhindered access to justice; protect defence lawyers, witnesses and victims against threats and harassment during trials, including those related to the 2010 ethnic conflict; and ensure public security and stability after the violent events of June 2010. In that respect, a special unit within the Ministry of Interior Affairs had been established for the protection of the rights of witnesses.

69. Torture had become a criminal offence in 2003. However, no one had been prosecuted for the crime of torture. The reason was that the occurrence of torture in Kyrgyzstan had been recognized at all levels only in 2010. Consequently, a number of measures had been undertaken to combat torture and ill-treatment since 2010, in particular the inclusion of anti-torture provisions in the Constitution and the adoption of the National Plan to Combat Torture. Monitoring by the Prosecutor's Office to uncover cases of torture and ill-treatment had been strengthened and the Prosecutor's Office now conducted systematic and unannounced visits to places of deprivation of liberty. A harsher penalty had been established for torture, which had become a serious crime in law. Methodology and instructions had been developed on how to investigate effectively cases of torture and ill-treatment. Almost all temporary detention sites and investigation cells had been equipped with cameras for internal monitoring.

70. An important means of combating torture was the Memorandum on Cooperation in Protecting Human Rights and Freedoms, signed in 2012 by the Ombudsman, the Procurator-General, the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Justice, the State Penal Correction Service, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe and human rights organizations. The signatories of the memorandum were entitled to carry out joint visits to places of deprivation of liberty throughout the country without prior authorization. The preventive measures had resulted in a decrease in reported cases of torture and ill-treatment in 2013 and in 2014 as compared to previous years.

71. Several legal acts had been adopted to combat terrorism and extremism, given the serious threats to public security, and sanctions against persons committing such crimes had been stepped up. Nevertheless, the respective laws and regulations set clear rules and conditions for the use of force and firearms by State security officers.

72. Croatia encouraged Kyrgyzstan to ratify CRPD and issue a standing invitation to the special procedure mandate holders. It welcomed legislation that increased penalties for bride-kidnapping and asked about action taken to fight discrimination and violence against LGBT persons. Croatia made recommendations.
73. Cuba noted with appreciation that Kyrgyzstan considered UPR as a mechanism promoting dialogue between the Government and civil society. It noted progress in education and child protection. Greater efforts to fight poverty were necessary. Cuba made recommendations.
74. The Czech Republic appreciated the information provided on the implementation of recommendation it had put forward during the 2010 UPR. It made recommendations.
75. Denmark expressed concern about attacks and threats against, and harassment of, civil society activists and human rights defenders, and that their space might be restricted by the draft legislation currently under consideration. Denmark made recommendations.
76. Estonia called on Kyrgyzstan to: ratify CRPD; give more attention to violence against women and children; refrain from adopting any legislation that would impose restrictions on foreign funding of NGOs; and implement the action plan on the prevention of torture. Estonia made recommendations.
77. Finland expressed concern at the bills on foreign agent NGOs and on limiting information on non-traditional sexual orientations and inquired about the status of those bills. Finland made recommendations.
78. France commended Kyrgyzstan on the ratification of the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR. France made recommendations.
79. Germany welcomed the establishment of a national preventive mechanism. It was encouraged by the draft legislation to strengthen the Constitutional Court and asked for its adoption timelines. Germany made recommendations.
80. Ghana commended Kyrgyzstan on the adoption of a new Constitution including significant human rights provisions. It welcomed the establishment of the National Council on Gender Issues. Ghana made recommendations.
81. Hungary commended the establishment of a national preventive mechanism. It expressed concern about the use of torture; the large number of child labourers, many of whom worked under hazardous conditions; and the bills which aimed to restrict the activities of NGOs. Hungary made recommendations.
82. India welcomed achievements in strengthening the legal and institutional framework. It encouraged measures for the participation of women in all sectors. It noted the Children's Code and initiatives such as "a school without violence". India asked about the impact of anti-corruption laws and programmes. India made recommendations.
83. Indonesia noted the special attention given to the prevention of torture, and the establishment of the National Plan to Combat Torture and the National Centre for the Prevention of Torture. Indonesia made recommendations.
84. Iraq valued the great efforts of Kyrgyzstan to promote and protect human rights. It welcomed legislative initiatives, including the adoption of the Criminal Code and the Administrative Liability Code. Iraq made a recommendation.
85. Ireland encouraged Kyrgyzstan to extend a standing invitation to all the special procedures. It was concerned by the reports of intimidation, reprisals and threats against human rights defenders. Ireland made recommendations.

86. Japan commended the efforts to improve the human rights situation under the new Constitution guaranteeing basic human rights. It was concerned at the inter-ethnic feuds, as well as cases of bride kidnapping, polygamous unions and early marriages. Japan made recommendations.

87. Jordan commended Kyrgyzstan on its efforts to further promote and protect human rights and on strengthening legislation through the adoption of a number of laws, such as the Anti-Corruption Act, the Criminal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure. Jordan made recommendations.

88. Kazakhstan noted with appreciation the efforts to bring legislation into line with the Constitution, the adoption of laws aimed at ensuring better protection of children and women, and the establishment of the National Centre for the Prevention of Torture. Kazakhstan made recommendations.

89. Kenya commended Kyrgyzstan on its cooperation with the United Nations human rights mechanisms. It acknowledged the efforts to address torture, including the establishment of the National Centre for the Prevention of Torture. Kenya made a recommendation.

90. Kuwait commended the efforts to implement previous UPR recommendations and to improve the human rights situation. It appreciated the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council. Kuwait made recommendations.

91. Latvia welcomed the steps taken to promote and protect the rights of women, including the National Strategy for Gender Equality. However, Latvia remained concerned about the violence against women and, in particular, forced marriage and domestic violence. Latvia made recommendations.

92. Lithuania commended the Government's efforts to harmonize national laws with the Constitution and international human rights norms. It made recommendations.

93. Malaysia encouraged Kyrgyzstan to pursue its efforts to bring the Office of the Ombudsman into conformity with the Paris Principles. It noted efforts to restore constitutional order and the rule of law after the revolution in April 2010. Malaysia made a recommendation.

94. Mauritania noted with appreciation legislative measures to protect human rights, and efforts to eliminate poverty and to combat violence against women. It encouraged Kyrgyzstan to continue its efforts to enhance social and economic development.

95. Mexico welcomed the submission of outstanding reports to treaty bodies and the human rights provisions in the new Constitution. It noted the adoption of the new law on freedom of peaceful assembly. Mexico made recommendations.

96. Montenegro welcomed the institutional changes for the protection of vulnerable groups. It asked about legislative measures that Kyrgyzstan had taken to criminalize the sale of children, child prostitution and child pornography and about steps taken for the protection of women's rights. Montenegro made recommendations.

97. Morocco commended Kyrgyzstan for the importance it had given to the independence of the judiciary, human rights education for judges, the fight against torture, efforts for the protection of the rights of vulnerable populations and measures to prevent and suppress human trafficking. Morocco made recommendations.

98. Namibia commended the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council and the National Council on Gender Issues, as well as the inclusion of human rights provisions in the Constitution. It also noted the advancement in freedom of expression and assembly. Namibia made recommendations.

99. The Netherlands appreciated the adoption of the Constitution and the implementation of the UPR recommendations on the prevention of torture, violence against women and combating corruption. It was concerned about legislative initiatives negatively affecting the space for civil society, in particular LGBT persons. The Netherlands made recommendations.

100. Nicaragua noted efforts made to consolidate democracy and the rule of law through the adoption of institutional and legislative changes. It welcomed the adoption of the National Sustainable Development Strategy 2013–2017. Nicaragua made recommendations.

101. Norway noted the constitutional reform in 2010 and the presidential and parliamentary elections as significant steps towards democracy. Norway was concerned about the lack of impartial investigation and fair prosecution regarding the events of June 2010. Norway made recommendations.

102. Pakistan stated that the amendments to the Civil Code, the Administrative Liability Code, the Criminal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure, judicial reforms and the Social Protection Development Strategy would make further contributions to strengthening human rights. Pakistan made recommendations.

103. Paraguay commended Kyrgyzstan on the new Constitution guaranteeing freedom of conscience and religion. It encouraged the Government to continue supporting the victims of the 2010 conflict. Paraguay made recommendations.

104. The Philippines noted with appreciation the restoration of law and order following the events of 2010; the improvement in the normative and legislative infrastructure and the advancement of the protection of the rights of children. It noted challenges in combating human trafficking and the need to continue addressing discrimination against minorities. The Philippines made recommendations.

105. Poland noted efforts to implement recommendations from the first review; the incorporation of human rights provisions in national legislation; and the increase in the sentence for bride-kidnapping. Further work was needed to address gender-based violence. It made recommendations.

106. Portugal noted the adoption of the Children's Code, but expressed concern about the reports of abuse of children in families, alternative care settings and schools, as well as increasing cases of sexual violence. It made recommendations.

107. The Republic of Korea acknowledged the advancements made in human rights in the face of social and political changes. It welcomed the establishment of the Human Rights Coordinating Council, the reform of the judicial system and the initiative to eliminate domestic violence. It made recommendations.

108. The Republic of Moldova requested information on the establishment of a juvenile justice system in accordance with international standards. It acknowledged the progress in combating violence against women, but shared the concerns of the United Nations human rights mechanisms that the issue remained widespread. It made a recommendation.

109. Romania acknowledged that the Government cooperated with the United Nations. It added that, while progress had been made, Kyrgyzstan had to take further steps in the promotion of human rights. Romania made recommendations.

110. The Russian Federation noted the successful implementation of the United Nations human rights treaties; the efforts to develop a legislative and institutional framework for the protection of human rights; and the positive impact of the efforts aimed at protecting the rights of the child. It made recommendations.

111. Serbia stated that the use of torture and the lack of justice for victims should be further addressed. It also noted the discrimination and intolerance towards marginalized groups. Serbia made recommendations.

112. Sierra Leone commended Kyrgyzstan for the progress made in promoting human rights. It expressed concern at the high incidence of child abuse, early marriage and sexual exploitation of children, as well as discrimination on religious grounds. Sierra Leone made recommendations.

113. Slovenia welcomed the accession of Kyrgyzstan to the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR. It expressed concern that the legal framework of the presidential elections was inconsistent with the Constitution. Challenges remained with regard to the investigation of attacks on journalists. Slovenia made recommendations.

114. Spain praised the ratification of the Second Optional Protocol to ICCPR as well as the legislative reforms to improve the situation of women. It was concerned about the legal initiatives resulting in discrimination based on sexual orientation. Spain made recommendations.

115. Regarding the questions on the protection of children, the delegation stated that Kyrgyzstan had become the first country in Central Asia to adopt a Children's Code providing guarantees and procedures for the protection of children, including vulnerable groups such as children living in difficult circumstances and children in conflict with the law.
